

Fruits and Vegetables Quiz: Guess from the Photos

1. This plant got its botanical name in honor of its discoverer, the Portuguese naturalist.

- kiwi
- medlar
- feijoa

2. A hybrid between this plant and an apricot is called a plemkot, and a plemkot hybrid with the same plant is called a pluot.

- plum
- cherry
- peach

3. The fleshy petioles of this plant are used as food and used to make compotes and jam. They are also used as a filling for pies.

- horseradish
- rhubarb
- asparagus

4. Mention of the fruit of this plant can be found in the XXIV song of Homer's Odyssey.

- apple
- pear
- peach

5. Only the fruits of this plant of the nightshade family are edible. In ancient Rome and Greece there was a belief that eating these fruits led to insanity.

- pepper
- tomato
- eggplant

6. The fruit of this plant is covered with a centimeter-long inedible peel. The flesh, consisting of several segments, is edible. Its leaves are used in folk medicine to treat dysentery.

- mangosteen
- rambutan
- persimmon

7. This is the fruit of a tropical liana known to us as passiflora or passion flower.

- grape
- passion fruit
- feijoa

8. The French name for this plant is derived from the word pie, derived from the resemblance of its fruit to this confectionery.

- watermelon
- zucchini
- passisone

9. This root vegetable is a subspecies of radish, but unlike it does not contain mustard oils.

- horseradish
- daikon
- turnip

10. In China, the main producer of this plant, it has been known since the 2nd century B.C.

- mangosteen
- lychee
- feijoa

11. The plant is native to the Malacca Peninsula. It is used as fresh food and in the preparation of juices and drinks.

- kiwi
- alycha
- lime

12. This vegetable is eaten unripe. Its juicy fruit contains 90 to 94 percent water.

- cucumber
- zucchini
- momordica

13. The unopened basket of the future flower is consumed as a vegetable in this plant.

- asparagus
- artichoke
- celery

14. This variety of cabbage has the stem as its edible part. It has been known as a cultivated vegetable since the days of ancient Rome.

- kohlrabi
- broccoli
- savoy cabbage

15. The fruits of this plant are the largest fruits growing on trees. They can weigh up to 34 kg.

- guava
- mango
- jackfruit

16. For food, this plant uses bulb slices, leaf arrows, and flower stalks of young plants.

- onion
- beet
- garlic

17. This plant is better known to us as a nut, but in its native land the sprawling, fleshy stalk (apple-cajun) is used as a fruit.

- cashews
- kiwi
- rambutan

18. This plant is one of the oldest in cultural vegetable production. According to some estimates, it was introduced into culture more than 40 centuries ago.

- turnip
- topinambur
- carrot

19. This plant is also known as "ground pear" and "Jerusalem artichoke. It has long been used as a food by North American Indians. It was introduced into Europe at the beginning of the 16th century.

- topinambur
- potatoes
- rutabaga

20. If you dry this fruit without a pit, it is called apricots, if with a pit it is called apricots, and if you take out the pit before drying, remove the kernel and put it back, it is called ashtak-pashtak.

- apples
- apricot
- pear

Fruits and Vegetables Quiz: Guess from the Photos

Right answers

1. This plant got its botanical name in honor of its discoverer, the Portuguese naturalist.
feijoa
2. A hybrid between this plant and an apricot is called a plemkot, and a plemkot hybrid with the same plant is called a pluot.
plum
3. The fleshy petioles of this plant are used as food and used to make compotes and jam. They are also used as a filling for pies.
rhubarb
4. Mention of the fruit of this plant can be found in the XXIV song of Homer's Odyssey.
pear
5. Only the fruits of this plant of the nightshade family are edible. In ancient Rome and Greece there was a belief that eating these fruits led to insanity.
eggplant
6. The fruit of this plant is covered with a centimeter-long inedible peel. The flesh, consisting of several segments, is edible. Its leaves are used in folk medicine to treat dysentery.
mangosteen
7. This is the fruit of a tropical liana known to us as passiflora or passion flower.
passion fruit
8. The French name for this plant is derived from the word pie, derived from the resemblance of its fruit to this confectionery.
passisone
9. This root vegetable is a subspecies of radish, but unlike it does not contain mustard oils.
daikon
10. In China, the main producer of this plant, it has been known since the 2nd century B.C.
lychee
11. The plant is native to the Malacca Peninsula. It is used as fresh food and in the preparation of juices and drinks.
lime
12. This vegetable is eaten unripe. Its juicy fruit contains 90 to 94 percent water.
cucumber
13. The unopened basket of the future flower is consumed as a vegetable in this plant.
artichoke
14. This variety of cabbage has the stem as its edible part. It has been known as a cultivated vegetable since the days of ancient Rome.
kohlrabi

15. The fruits of this plant are the largest fruits growing on trees. They can weigh up to 34 kg.
jackfruit

16. For food, this plant uses bulb slices, leaf arrows, and flower stalks of young plants.
garlic

17. This plant is better known to us as a nut, but in its native land the sprawling, fleshy stalk (apple-cajun) is used as a fruit.
cashews

18. This plant is one of the oldest in cultural vegetable production. According to some estimates, it was introduced into culture more than 40 centuries ago.
turnip

19. This plant is also known as "ground pear" and "Jerusalem artichoke. It has long been used as a food by North American Indians. It was introduced into Europe at the beginning of the 16th century.
topinambur

20. If you dry this fruit without a pit, it is called apricots, if with a pit it is called apricots, and if you take out the pit before drying, remove the kernel and put it back, it is called ashtak-pashtak.
apricot