

Quiz: Guess the Red Flower by Photo

1. This plant made its triumphant march through gardens and flowerbeds in China as early as 551 BC. It was then introduced to Japan, where it became the national flower.

- chrysanthemum
- lotus
- rose

2. This flower is a traditional Christmas gift in Scandinavian countries.

- poinsettia
- schlumbergera
- phalaenopsis

3. This plant got its name from the Dutch botanist Jan Gronovius. He named it after his German colleague named Traugott ...

- chrysanthemum
- iris
- gerbera

4. This beautiful orchid is one of the most popular on our windowsills. There are also hybrids among them that are colored red.

- cymbidium
- phalaenopsis
- dendrobium

5. This plant got its modern name from Carl Linnaeus in 1737. In Greek it means "flame".

- crocus
- phlox
- mimosa

6. Wreaths made of this plant are used in Austria and Germany in fortune telling for marriage. There is also a belief that if such a wreath is hung over the windows, lightning will never enter the house.

- periwinkle

- geranium
- begonia

7. According to the ancient Roman writer Pliny, an amulet made from the bulb of this plant could protect from death and grant victory in battle.

- lily
- gladiolus
- hyacinth

8. This plant began to be bred and selected back in ancient Rome. Descriptions of its varieties can be found in the works of ancient Roman writers.

- rhododendron
- rose
- snowball

9. This plant blooms and bears fruit abundantly in the spring. After the end of flowering, the faded bulb dies and several new young bulbs are laid in its place.

- tulip
- daffodil
- phlox

10. The Mexican Indians called this plant "chichipatl," "acocotle," and "cococochitl."

- dahlia
- rose
- daisy

11. One of the hybrids of this plant is commonly known in indoor gardening as amaryllis.

- senpollia
- hippeastrum
- alocasia

12. This plant has varieties with white or yellow flowers, but most often they are piercing red. In the wild, it prefers dry areas.

- clover

iris

poppy

13. This plant, unlike its famous counterpart, is not used for cloth. It is bred only as an ornamental plant to decorate gardens and flower beds.

red-flowered cotton

linum grandiflorum

hemp with beautiful flowers

14. The bulbs of some varieties of this plant are used as food in Siberia, the Far East, and Japan.

lily

lotus

chamomile

15. In indoor gardening, this plant is called the Chinese rose. According to some opinions, it came to us from the Malay Archipelago.

azalea

begonia

hibiscus

16. Many species of this plant are poisonous, all their parts contain andromedotoxin. And even the honey from the flowers of this plant is also poisonous, which sometimes leads to poisoning of people.

poinsettia

croton

azalea

17. This charming plant belongs to the clove family. Its Latin name is Lichnis (Lichnis).

phlox

zorka

velvetveteen

18. The leaves of this plant produce a fragrant essential oil used in perfumery and medicine.

lime

- begonia
- pelargonium

19. In Japan, the cultivation of these flowers was one of the occupations of the samurai class.

- Azalea
- Camellia
- Magnolia

Quiz: Guess the Red Flower by Photo

Right answers

1. This plant made its triumphant march through gardens and flowerbeds in China as early as 551 BC. It was then introduced to Japan, where it became the national flower.
chrysanthemum
2. This flower is a traditional Christmas gift in Scandinavian countries.
poinsettia
3. This plant got its name from the Dutch botanist Jan Gronovius. He named it after his German colleague named Traugott ...
gerbera
4. This beautiful orchid is one of the most popular on our windowsills. There are also hybrids among them that are colored red.
phalaenopsis
5. This plant got its modern name from Carl Linnaeus in 1737. In Greek it means "flame".
phlox
6. Wreaths made of this plant are used in Austria and Germany in fortune telling for marriage. There is also a belief that if such a wreath is hung over the windows, lightning will never enter the house.
periwinkle
7. According to the ancient Roman writer Pliny, an amulet made from the bulb of this plant could protect from death and grant victory in battle.
gladiolus
8. This plant began to be bred and selected back in ancient Rome. Descriptions of its varieties can be found in the works of ancient Roman writers.
rose
9. This plant blooms and bears fruit abundantly in the spring. After the end of flowering, the faded bulb dies and several new young bulbs are laid in its place.
tulip
10. The Mexican Indians called this plant "chichipatl," "acocotle," and "cococochitl."
dahlia
11. One of the hybrids of this plant is commonly known in indoor gardening as amaryllis.
hippeastrum
12. This plant has varieties with white or yellow flowers, but most often they are piercing red. In the wild, it prefers dry areas.
poppy
13. This plant, unlike its famous counterpart, is not used for cloth. It is bred only as an ornamental plant to decorate gardens and flower beds.
linum grandiflorum

14. The bulbs of some varieties of this plant are used as food in Siberia, the Far East, and Japan.
lily

15. In indoor gardening, this plant is called the Chinese rose. According to some opinions, it came to us from the Malay Archipelago.

hibiscus

16. Many species of this plant are poisonous, all their parts contain andromedotoxin. And even the honey from the flowers of this plant is also poisonous, which sometimes leads to poisoning of people.

azalea

17. This charming plant belongs to the clove family. Its Latin name is Lichnis (Lichnis).

zorka

18. The leaves of this plant produce a fragrant essential oil used in perfumery and medicine.

pelargonium

19. In Japan, the cultivation of these flowers was one of the occupations of the samurai class.

Camellia